HHFT's visitor management plan is being designed to manage existing hiker visitation to the Highlands and projected future growth through a multi-faceted strategy. Diffusing trail users along the 7.5-mile planned route with six unique trail entry points, adding parking capacity and amenities like public restrooms and food options north of the Village, encouraging train travel to the improved Breakneck Ridge train station, and the addition of the HHFT Visitor Center at Dutchess Manor (including food options and more restrooms) will likely lighten Cold Spring's current load where hiking visitors are concerned. Visitors who have no interest in hiking, but instead come to Cold Spring to shop and dine on Main Street or enjoy the scenic view from the Village's waterfront, will still need to be managed by the Village. HHFT is happy to offer any recommendations—gleaned from the hundreds of hours of data collection our consultants and partners have spent on the project's behalf—to VCS leadership should they be interested in receiving it.
